Advocacy Architect & Resilience Expert

About Mariah

At age 12, Mariah's world changed in an instant. After surviving a massive stroke, she found herself navigating middle school in a wheelchair and a helmet. She knows firsthand what it feels like to feel isolated and different, but she also knows the life-changing power of one invitation to the dance floor. Today, she serves as the Project Manager for Inclusivity, helping students turn their differences into their greatest superpowers and ensuring no student stands alone.

"Mariah came to Argonaut Elementary school and shared her amazing story which inspired us all. Her courage and triumph is a lesson we can all use in our daily lives. Thank you Mariah for inspiring us all to be better people."
